

Registration Requirements:

1. A Current Passport is required to travel - Subject to the "six months passport rule"

What is the six months validity passport rule?

It is not a requirement of the U.S. government. The six-month validity passport rule is a requirement of other countries accepting foreign travelers. The six-month passport validity rule is enforced because nations do not want to risk having travelers and tourists overstaying their passport validity. Six months is now the standard validity requirement for many countries. Most visitors to the United States are also now required to have six months validity of their passports.
